Accessing Mental Health Care for your Family During the Covid-19 Outbreak

Practices which support our mental and physical health are important at any time, but most especially when exposure to stress is high - such as in the middle of a pandemic. Times of immense and sudden change can cause new mental health symptoms to develop, and existing ones to worsen. And of course, this is exactly at the same time that a lot of wellness practices become harder to maintain. Along with getting creative about practicing healthy habits (check out these resources from SAMHSA: https://tinyurl.com/trrcl82), it's also important to know about ways to access mental health care services even, and especially, while social distancing remains necessary:

Teletherapy and Cost Coverage

- Many mental health providers, including those for children and teens, are expanding their services to offer teletherapy over secure video conferencing platforms, allowing you to meet with any therapist in the state, from wherever you are, through your laptop, tablet or phone.
- Many insurance companies are offering expanded coverage and waived fees for teletherapy during the outbreak. Check with your insurance company to confirm benefits and providers. https://www.ahip.org/health-insurance-providers-respond-to-coronavirus-covid-19/
- Medicaid and Medicare have expanded their coverage to include teletherapy during the outbreak.
   Find a teletherapist who accepts Medicaid or Medicare, and ask them about what is covered:
   https://medicaid.ncdhhs.gov/find-a-doctor/mental-health-providers or https://www.medicare.gov/physiciancompare/
- If you have lost your health coverage during this outbreak, you may qualify for a special enrollment period through the healthcare marketplace. For more information, visit https://www.healthcare.gov/blog/coronavirus-marketplace-coverage/
- Or call the 24/7 Access Line to your LME (https://www.ncdhhs.gov/providers/lme-mco-directory) for confidential referrals to free or sliding scale teletherapy.
- Companies like Better Help (www.betterhelp.com/) and Talkspace (www.talkspace.com) specialize in teletherapy at discounted rates. Talkspace Teen offers teletherapy to kids 13+.

24/7 Free and Crisis Support

- For those not wanting to seek therapy, or wanting immediate support, Optum is offering a free 24 hour Emotional Support Line, open to everyone, at 1-866-342-6892.
- Parents in need of talk support can call the National Parent Helpline at 1-855-427-2736
- For mental health crisis concerns, see here for resources including the Mobile Crisis Unit: https://www.ncdhhs.gov/assistance/mental-health-substance-abuse/crisis-services.
- The National Domestic Violence Hotline: 1-800-799-7233, thehotline.org or text LOVEIS to 22522
- ChildHelp National Child Abuse Hotline: 1-800-4-A-CHILD (1-800-422-4453)
- National Suicide Prevention Lifeline: 1-800-273-TALK (8255)